

MAKE 2018 THE YEAR YOU MANAGE SAFETY AND REDUCE COSTS

How do you balance safety and cost control in your organization? Safety compliance can be expensive, especially for a small company. But then again, can you afford an accident? The cost of a lost time injury averages $37,000 according to the National Safety Council. That doesn't include the damage to your reputation from:

OSHA – Fine amounts have increased by nearly 85% since 2016.

Customers – In many industries, a bad safety record can keep you from getting contracts.

Employees – Companies with strong safety cultures have an easier time hiring/retaining quality workers.

Unfortunately, smaller companies have limited resources for safety programs. Studies indicate that the costs of safety can equal eight percent of a company's payroll and that companies employ an average of one safety professional for every 300 employees. Companies with fewer than 300 employees can be at a cost disadvantage with their larger competitors.

Solutions

Lifeline Strategies has the experience and expertise to help smaller companies meet government compliance and customer requirements, reduce incidents and protect their employees.

If your company is too small to afford a full-time safety staff...

Let us be your safety department! Lifeline Strategies can:

- Create and maintain your safety program
- Keep you in compliance with OSHA, customer audits, and online safety surveys
- Ensure your employees receive proper training
- Respond when there is an injury or other emergency

If you already have a safety professional...

That is great! But safety directors need to be out working directly with your employees promoting your safety program, not chained to a desk doing paperwork. Let us help free your safety director to be a leader by:

- Managing your safety documentation and compliance
- Keeping you up to date with customer requirements
- Assisting with special projects
- Lending a hand in training and safety meetings

Let Lifeline Strategies help you bring your safety culture to the next level. Contact us at info@lifelinestrategies.com or call Ken Wells at 985-789-0577.
